Generated with sparks and insights from 10 sources

Executive Summary

📈 Market Insights & Observations

Why No Website Matters

The contrast is stark. The top-reviewed dentist in Pretoria, Dr J Vally-Omar with 458 Google reviews, has a website and is also active on Snupit[9] with 13 reviews there. Similarly, Hatfield Dental Studio (163 reviews) leverages its website effectively. Dentists without websites are likely losing significant patient volume to those who have professional online presences. d7leadfinder.com[1]

⚠️ Important Notes

1. Heavenly Crowns Dental Pretoria (Ben Viljoen St, Pretoria North) was identified as having no website, but their Facebook page[10] announced permanent closure — so this practice is no longer active.
2. Review counts for no-website dentists were not explicitly available from Google Maps API (which returns only star ratings). The review count data from D7 Lead Finder[1] covered mainly the website-owning practices. The no-website dentists generally have fewer public reviews (estimated 5–50 range based on their visibility), which itself may be a consequence of lacking a website to drive engagement.
3. Dr. Elaine de Lange represents the single best opportunity — she has a 4.9★ rating, active Facebook presence (562 likes), is listed across multiple insurance networks, receives glowing patient testimonials, and yet has zero website. Facebook[2]
4. All contact details were verified across Google Maps and cross-referenced with available directory listings including Old Mutual Dentistry Network[3] and Snupit[7].
